TOWN TALK.

"Mizpah" at Redmond's this afternoon and evening.

Mr. N. Boomer, of Fisher's Station, was in the city yesterday.

Division Street Roller Rink is closed. Lack of appreciation of printers ink.

Good for Detective Connolly. He collected $40.30 for the relief fund.

Over $245 in cash was received at St. Mark's Home on Thanksgiving.

Hash will be the subject of Mrs. Knight's lecture at the cooking school this afternoon.

Many wanderers returned home to annihilate the annual turkey under the parental roof.

The G. R. & I. railroad will build a watch-tower at the corner of Fulton and Ottawa streets.

Some of the local sports enjoyed a cock fight just out of the city on Thanksgiving afternoon.

The Buss Machine Works have shipped a car-load of machinery to the New Orleans exposition.

The usual report at headquarters last night. Numerous naphtha lamps not burning, and one lodger.

Hine thinks the reason they have no elope-ments in Lowell is because the people are all too poor to keep coaches.

Hackmen complain of bad business. They say they barely earn enough to pay expenses. Cause assigned, too many hacks.

The J. B. Richardson camp of S. of V. meets every Tuesday evening in Champlin Post hall, corner of Scribner and Bridge streets.

Unlawful to shoot deer after Sunday next, and hunters are going home. Many of them are in mourning for valuable hounds lost in the woods.

Justice Browner united John Campbell and Ada Slater, of Casnovia, Muskegon County, in marriage at his office last Wednesday.

The county jail inspectors have finished their labors and are busy preparing a report of their investigations. They found the jail in splendid order.

Ankle Koplers, No. 11 Kent alley, diphtheria, and Freddie Plume, No. 46 Sinclair street, scarlet fever, were on the report of the Board of Health yesterday.

Detective Connolly was kept "hustling" all day yesterday, gathering in eight "crooks" for various minor offences, and his wallet still bulges with more warrants.

At the services in the Fountain street synagogue last evening, Rabbi Cohn delivered an impressive and eloquent discourse on "Man according to the conception of Judaism."

Mrs. Caroline Patten died early yesterday morning at the residence of her son, Lyman Patten, 368 Fulton street. She was aged 79 years. The funeral will be to-morrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

The sidewalks are in a terribly slippery condition, and the presence of the boy and the hand sled on every sidewalk with an incline in the city, make the efforts of the pedestrian exceedingly hazardous.

Mrs. F. M. Davis, her pupils, and Mr. H. C. Post is preparing to give a musical at the Iowa Street Armory, next Wednesday evening. The members of the St. Cecilia and Schubert Clubs have been invited to attend.

Patrolman J. B. Johnson and wife were given a pleasant surprise party on Thanksgiving evening, it being the fifth anniversary of their wedding. Numerous friends were present and a most enjoyable evening ensued.

A boy named Julian Fitzgerald was found wandering about the streets yesterday evening last, being unable to find his way home. He was taken to headquarters and afterwards conveyed in the patrol wagon to his aunt's, 50 Cherry street.

The first Monday in May will witness the usual land-tax sales in Treasurer Stebbins' office. The unpaid taxes of 1882 on land will be thus disposed of. Speculators are already beginning to stow away money in stocks and teasots for the event.

The alarm of fire at two minutes to six last evening from box 73 was on account of a fire in a new house at 118 Gold street, unoccupied and owned by John Kahalski. Damage $25. The fire caught from a salamander used for drying the plaster.

The alarm of fire at 2:30 this morning was caused by the bursting of a gas pipe near a burning jet, at the entrance to the Royal Palm saloon in the Porter block, on Monroe street. The flames were extinguished without the aid of the department and before any damage was done.

A team of horses attached to a delivery truck belonging to the Star Mills took fright at the pranks of some boys, on Ottawa street yesterday afternoon, and ran south, colliding with a buggy as they crossed Monroe street, throwing a lady out and bruising her. They were stopped near the Michigan House.

As Paul Friedrich turned from Livingston street into East Bridge last evening the omnipresent boy and sled ran into Mr. F.'s horse and cutter, badly frightening the equine, and it was only by a miraculous chance that a serious mishap was averted. The coasting nuisance should be stopped or regulated.

The police stopped the boys coasting on Lyon and Fountain streets yesterday afternoon. Boys were very indignant and appealed to the City Clerk's office for an explanation of what they considered an outrage and interference with their rights. They will petition the Council Monday night to designate streets for coasting purposes.

Killed by a Falling Tree.

A laborer named Sebott, employed by a farmer named Tubbs, residing six miles east of this city, was killed, Thanksgiving afternoon by a tree falling on him, crushing his skull and breaking his legs, arms and back. His death was caused by the tree suddenly splitting while he was sawing it, and one of the parts falling on him while attempting to escape. He is unmarried and is supposed to have formerly lived at Lowell. Coroner Bradish was notified, but he decided an inquest unnecessary. If not claimed by friends the funeral will be held from Dolbeare & McCollum's undertaking rooms, where the remains now lie.

Almy-Varin.

A pleasant little company of invited friends gathered at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Varin, 155 North Division street, Thanksgiving evening. The chief event of the occasion was the wedding of their daughter Addie M. to Charles D. Almy, the ceremony being performed by Rev. Chas. Finbner. Mr. Almy is the popular cigar and news dealer at the Eagle Hotel, and has made THE TELEGRAM one of his best selling specialties since its establishment.

MR. BAYNE ASSAULTED.

ATTACKED AND HORSE-WHIPPED.

Brank C. Braun, a Musician, the Assailant—The Reasons for the Attack Given by Both Parties.

About 7:30 o'clock last night as James Bayne, the well-known photographer, was passing down Fulton street in front of Maj. Watson's residence, he was set upon and assailed by a young man named Frank C. Braun, an employe in the printing house of M. A. True & Co. Braun had a whip, which was evidently gotten up for the occasion as it had three lashes. As Braun sprang at Mr. Bayne he hit him a smarting blow across the face with the cat's three tails. The men then eluded and fell to the ground, Mr. Bayne being under, with a firm grip upon Braun. The latter released his hold and began to give his victim a severe slashing with the whip. He was soon interrupted by "Sandy" Thompson, who happened to observe the melee from a street-car, bound down town, and jumped off and grabbed Braun and took the whip away from him. Braun offered no resistance and took his whip and walked quietly away while Bayne proceeded down town to Luce's Hall, where he was to give a dancing lesson. Shortly after the above-mentioned occurrence, a TELEGRAM reporter was detailed to ascertain if possible the causes which provoked the attack, and accordingly called upon T. C. Braun the attacking party, at his residence, No. 42 South Division street. Mr. Braun received the reporter very cordially and talked unhesitatingly in reference to the facts which incited the assault. He said that Mr. Bayne had circulated slanderous stories, which reflected seriously upon his wife's character.

When asked if he could substantiate the assertion that Bayne had insinuated concerning his wife's chastity, Mr. Braun replied: "Certainly I can. The stories have come to me from two or three different sources, and that from friends upon whom I can rely. Why, only ten days ago he stated that my wife was an impure woman. I could not stand this, so I gave him a good drubbing."

"When did you first hear of Mr. Bayne's making these statements?"

"Why, last summer. It came to me pretty direct, too, and I have stood all I am going to of it, too. I have full confidence in my wife's faithfulness and loyalty."

"What is your business, Mr. Braun?"

"I am a printer by trade, and also a musician. My wife and I play for Misses Gage and Benedict's dancing school. We have always borne a good reputation, and are not disposed to be assailed by slanderous gossip, especially when we can trace its origin."

Mr. Braun introduced the reporter to his wife, who, by the way, is a fine looking woman, with an attractive face, rather of a classical mould and a bright, expressive eye, with a plump, well-developed figure. She was in a very pleasant humor, and looked with a proud smile of contentment at her husband, and seemed inclined to rejoice that he had acquitted himself so well. "We have been pretty good-natured," she said, "but we could not tolerate Mr. Bayne's statements any longer. I heard last summer that he had made some improper statements reflecting upon me, and I wrote him a polite note requesting him to come to my room, desiring him to give an explanation of his conduct. He did not respond, but used my note as a weapon against me, hinting that I had sent for him for a different purpose. We finally consulted an attorney and he has the matter under advisement, and we are determined that Mr. Bayne shall scandalize us no farther."

Both talked freely about the affair. Shortly after the assault Mr. Braun reported the matter at Police Headquarters, leaving his address in case they should want to see him.

After parting with Mr. Braun, the reporter hastened to find Mr. Bayne, and get his version of the encounter. Mr. Bayne was seen on Monroe street, just below the Morton House. When the reporter hinted the object of his inquiry, Mr. Bayne seemed nervous and somewhat worried. "This has been an unfortunate affair, and I would much prefer you would say nothing about it in the papers," The reporter assured Mr. Bayne that the tongues of gossip had the story well under circulation, and that in going the rounds from tongue to tongue, the affair would be greatly exaggerated, and that a clear statement of the facts would avert this misrepresentation, and that the affair would be more speedily dismissed from the public mind. Mr. Bayne's statement of the facts which led to the assault were as follows:

"Well, Mr. Braun and wife came here from the East about three years ago, and coming from the vicinity of my old home in New York State. I knew Mrs. Braun when she was a girl. The first winter that they were here I employed them to play at my dancing school. They played there nearly all that winter. Failing in living up to their agreement, I discharged them, and there has been more or less feeling existing between us ever since. Mrs. Braun called on me several times and asked me to re-engage them. I finally did so last winter, but was obliged to let them go and get somebody else. Of course this intensified the bitter feeling that already existed between us."

Mr. Bayne denied emphatically that he had ever reflected in any way upon Mrs. Braun's character. He also stated that he was undecided whether to bring an action for assault or not, and intimated that he could make it hot for the Braun family if he desired to. As he had in no way invited the attack upon him he felt much depressed that it had happened, as he had always borne a good reputation in the community, and had a good business, and would give a good deal if it had not happened at all. It is a most unfortunate thing, he remarked, and felt confident that he could set himself in the eyes of the community entirely free from any blame. The reporter also saw a third party, a clerk in a certain hotel, who begged piteously that his name be withheld. Mr. Braun referred to him as one of the parties who had heard Mr. Bayne make some remarks compromising his wife's good name. The hotel clerk acknowledged that he had heard the gentleman of the camera obscure make an uncomplimentary remark about Mrs. Braun.

DEAD IN BED.

A Temperance Lecture in One Short But Solemn Chapter.

Thanksgiving morning about 3:40 o'clock a well-dressed man about thirty years of age entered the Clarendon Hotel and requested the clerk to register his name, J. W. Burch, Kansas City. He was assigned a room and left an order to be called in time for breakfast. Nothing more was thought of him until 5:30, when he called the clerk and requested him to bring him up a whiskey cocktail, a pint of whiskey and a pitcher of ice-water. This was brought him. He drank the cocktail and then turned over and went to sleep. At 8:30 he was called for breakfast and responded that he would be right down. At 10:30 the servant girl entered the room intent upon making up the bed, but seeing a man upon the bed asleep, she silently withdrew. Burch was alive, as she could hear a slight snore. John Killeen went up to the room at 2:30 and found Burch dead. He was lying on his back and had all his clothes on except his shoes, coat and hat. A letter from his mother, who resides in Morley, was found on his person, and also a twenty dollar bill, four one dollar bills and some small change amounting to $3.48. Coroner Bradish was informed and had the body removed to Duffee's undertaking establishment, and summoned a jury comprising the following named gentlemen: Elliott Judd, L. B. Bradish, B. Alley, A. C. Chisholm, W. H. Tuttle and B. O'Hara.

Dr. Hake made a post mortem examination and found the stomach was congested, and almost ruined from the use of alcohol. The deceased had been on a spree for several days, and had suffered a good many reverses in life on account of his dissipated habits. He leaves a wife in Lowell, from whom he was separated some years ago on account of his erratic ways. His mother has been notified and will arrive here to-day and take charge of the remains. The inquest will be held at 10 o'clock this morning.

A FESTIVE COACHMAN.

WHO YEARNS FOR AN ELOPEMENT

Not With a Millionaire's Daughter, But With His Wealthy Employer's Cook—It Still Hangs Fire.

After several long months of patient waiting Grand Rapids has at last developed a coachman who is one of the sensational sort, can drive a fine team, make love and play an elope-ment, if not with a rich man's daughter—with his good-looking and skilful cook. About six months ago John Raak and his pleasant wife moved from Grand Haven to this city. John succeeded in obtaining a position as coachman to Mr. Joseph H. Wonderly, and at once moved with his family into a pleasant little cottage in the rear of the Wonderly mansion on Cherry street. Strange coincidence: About the time John and his wife were nicely settled, a Mrs. Baxter, of Spring Lake, who is only a short distance from Grand Haven, also came to the city and secured a position as chief of the culinary department in Mr. Wonderly's kitchen. After the coming of Mrs. Baxter, whose husband is still living and from whom she is anxious to secure a divorce, the domestic tranquility of the Raak family became somewhat disturbed. It was soon made evident that John loved the would-be widow more than he did his legal companion, and it was rumored—in fact Mrs. Raak claims she can prove—that the lady at the mansion paid John more attentions than were either becoming or discreet. At the highest stage of the game Mrs. Raak took occasion to visit her parents, and left John to pursue his course of true love unfettered and unannoyed. Upon her return to the little cottage she was thoroughly convinced he had not been true to her and that another had supplanted and usurped her place in the husband's heart. She told her companion of her fears and findings, when he waxed wroth and choked and otherwise abused her. This happened about two weeks ago and since that time all has not gone "as merry as a marriage bell" at the yellow cottage. It was rumored yesterday that John and the pretty cook were making every preparation for an elope-ment, but Mrs. Raak's father and Attorney McBride, of Grand Haven, arrived upon the scene, became convinced that Mr. and Mrs. Raak could no longer live together in peace, and began making a satisfactory distribution of the household effects between man and wife. After two wise lawyers have received fat fees for procuring two divorces, John and the woman who now claims the greater part of his affections, will probably be made one by the legal course; there will be no elope-ment, and the cruel, wicked world will turn round just as usual, and coachmen continue to attract a great share of the people's attention.

Artificial Light.

In these days of progress there is a demand for better means of illumination than ever before. The dazzling brilliancy of the electric light makes our common kerosene lamps as dim as tallow dips in the comparison. This demand has been fully met by the introduction of the Sun Lamp. They are necessarily made of metal because the draft or chimney extends down through the center of the lamp. The wicks are five inches wide and give a light of forty-five candle power, equal to three gas burners. These lamps were brought out at the close of last season, but the price was so high—$6 each—but few were sold. Owing to the enormous demand which has sprung up, they are now produced at a price within the reach of all, and sold for $3 in brass and $3.50 in nickel, complete with ten-inch porcelain shade. To persons troubled with weak eyes or those who desire to preserve their eyesight by means of a good light, the Sun Lamp will prove a blessing.

The New Styles of Hanging Lamps are made of a gold color solid bronze metal, and trimmed with cut glass prisms and decorated shades. The dome-shaped shades look the best, but we imagine the angle of reflection from the cone shape is best for throwing light down. These lamps are also much cheaper than last year. They are now sold at from $5 to $7 each. Fine table lamps are furnished with duplex or two-wick burners, giving double the light of the single wick burners. There are many styles of these lamps on exhibition, including solid bronze and the popular hammered brass. For information received thanks are due Messrs. H. Leonard & Sons, importers, 16 Monroe street.
